ernments against the revolutionary proletariat."

"It is necessary," the resolution adds, "to demonstrate for international solidarity, for the common fight of the entire proletariat, for the capture of political power, for a world revolution and for socialistic freedom."

The Workmen's Councils of the Social Democratic and German Democratic parties passed a resolution which says that while they would sympathize with the general strike against the Versailles "peace of imperialism" they see in the stoppage of work in Germany no advantage to be gained, since every hour of failure by men to work will slow down the reconstruction of the country.

The resolution recommends no cessetion of work, but favors participation by workmen after working hours in a Socialist demonstration for general fraternity.
